Cookies

Our sites use cookies to better serve you when you return to the website. A cookie is a piece of data that a site can send to your browser, which may then be stored on your computer as an anonymous tag that identifies your computer but not you.

You can set your browser to notify you before you receive a cookie, giving you the chance to decide whether to accept it. You can also set your browser to turn off cookies. If you do so, some pages in the site may not work properly.

Cookies are either persistent or session based. Persistent cookies are stored on your computer, contain an expiry date, and may be used to track your browsing behaviour upon return to the issuing site. Session cookies are short-lived, are used only during a browsing session, and expire when you quit your browser.

Our sites use both kinds of cookies to provide a rich and session-based experience. The cookies are used to enable us to track anonymised users' browsing patterns in order to provide statistical information to improve the usability of the sites.

Website analytics

Our websites use Google Analytics and Meta for website analytics. We use website analytics data to help us make the website better by understanding how our website is used.

Google Analytics does not identify individual users or associate your IP address with any other data held by Google. Google Analytics transmits website traffic data to servers offshore.

In using our website, you should also refer to and ensure you understand the Google Analytics terms of use terms.

You can opt out of Google Analytics cookies by installing an add-on for your web browser.
